I was inspired to write this song because of all the hate in this world. I can see a problem and I can see that it needs to be solved. The lyrics show all of the discrimination and violence that are caused by racially motivated stereotypes.

The song is also divided into 3 genres/styles to give different tones to the same general message. Poetry represents the truth and the lies that we have been told and that we need to understand to actually make an impact. The rap portions of the song depict the tragic reality of what we are facing as a civilization. The actual singing parts in the song show the sadness and the need for equality in this world.

This song as a whole shows the problems with policing in our society. It all explains how unfair our world is and how people are living afraid and dying because of racist remarks. This song is about how "we all deserve freedom."
